EXECUTOR

Every will must have an executor or personal representative. An executor is a person who will carry out the intent of your will and administer your estate after you die. The executor's duties also include the disbursing of property to the beneficiaries as designated in the will, obtaining information about any other potential heirs, and collecting and arranging payment for estate debts. An executor also makes sure estate taxes are calculated, necessary forms are filed and tax payments are made, and assist the attorney for the estate. Although not legally required in most states, it is usually helpful that the executor live in your home state.

GUARDIANSHIP OF MINOR CHILDREN

NOT APPLICABLE

A legal guardian is a person who has the legal authority (and the corresponding duty) to care for the personal and property interests of another person. In your will, you may appoint a legal guardian to raise your minor children (under 18 years old) in your absence. Much care should be taken in choosing an appropriate guardian who will reflect your values and beliefs. Include both spouses if your chosen guardian is married so that each will have authority to act on behalf of the child(ren).

* Name, city, and state of the primary designated guardian for dependent children.

* If your first choice is unable or unwilling to serve, please name an alternate guardian for dependent children.

PROPERTY TRUSTEE FOR POTENTIAL MINOR OR DISABLED BENEFICIARIES (INCLUDING SPOUSE)

If you have named a minor as a potential beneficiary or you have (or could have) minor grandchildren, you should consider designating a trustee to manage the property that the minor stands to inherit. The trustee can be the same individual or a different individual than the one you name as the guardian of your minor children – or your executor can serve in both roles.

LIVING TRUST

A living trust is a legal document that holds title to various assets, which provides control, management and privacy. Living trusts are known as a will substitute, which avoids many of the normal delays and expenses related to probate. While living trusts are useful and potentially beneficial, most individuals do not need them unless you reside in certain states (ex: California) or own real estate in several states. Those with special needs or a very large estate can also benefit from a living trust. A living trust is more costly to draft and must be funded, otherwise there is little to no benefit of it. A will is still needed when using a living trust. For more information, please speak to your attorney or financial advisor.
